BOSTON CIVIC INNOVATION PILOT

Silver Act

Women 55+ turning experience into civic action.

You have accumulated wisdom. Here is a place to put it to work. Silver Act brings women together to share what they know, explore a concern they care about, and choose a practical next step.

Your experience is a civic asset.

Knowledge built through work, caregiving, migration, family, and community life deserves recognition. Bring your experience and questions. You do not need a professional title or a ready-made solution.

Three free meetings. That's it.

1. Collect the problems. Share everyday challenges and choose a concern the group wants to explore.

2. Pool our wisdom. Bring together everyone's knowledge and skills. Investigate the concern from different perspectives.

3. Choose a next step. Identify a problem the group can help solve, connect with relevant partners, and decide on a practical action.

Participants shape the work.

The group defines what matters. Partners contribute resources and expertise once the challenge is clearer. The initial commitment is three sessions; what happens afterward is a choice the group makes together.

Beginning with community conversations.

We are exploring a Boston pilot with community organizations, including partners in East Boston. Session dates and venues will be shared on the website when confirmed.
